Moderate interest in timber area

By Dale Lomas

A number of forest industry companies have expressed interest in the Bruce Timber Development Area, but so far, none have made formal applications to the government.

Don Ferguson, director of the timber management branch of the provincial department of energy and natural resources, said Friday he has had several requests for information and clarification of the proposal, but he really doesn't expect any formal applications until just before the June 1, 1982 deadline.

"You really can't expect any of the interested parties to come up with a design proposal until at least February or March of next year, and I really don't expect anything concrete until as late as May," Mr. Ferguson said.

Most of the companies who have expressed interest have asked for the information package supplied by the timber management branch, and have also requested clarification of the terms of reference to be used in selecting successful proposals.

Mr. Ferguson declined to reveal which companies have requested such information.

The information package lists the estimated cost of timber that may be taken from the two blocks of the development area, as well as outlined personnel to be used in the application procedure.

The O'Chiese block, which is located roughly between the O'Chiese and Rocky Mountain House, has an estimated annual harvest volume of 124,000 cords of coniferous timber and 164,000 cords of deciduous, mostly poplar, timber.

The Neuderg block, located west and south of the O'Chiese block, contains an annual cut of about 800,000 cords of coniferous timber.

Under the terms of reference dealing with the development area, companies can make application for timber management permits for either or both of the blocks. Preference will be given to those proposals which outline development plans in the Drayton Valley and Rocky Mountain House areas.

"We would like to see development in these two areas mainly to avoid the necessity of having a satellite town springing up around some sort of plant way off in the wild somewhere," Mr. Ferguson said.

Such development would be able to utilize the existing infrastructure of the two towns located near the development area, he added.

However, whether or not includes primarily a saw mill operation, that would probably entail locating the mill closer to the wood supply than if we accepted a proposal including a chemical-mechanical pulp mill," he said.

That meeting is scheduled for September 3.

Mr. Taylor said the two sides "aren't that far apart" as far as money goes, and about the only area left for negotiation is a system of implementation of the union's demands and the LTD's offer.

The Yellowhead School Division (YSD) and its clerical workers appear closer than ever in a settlement of the strike by members of local 2155 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

Following a nine hour meeting on Monday aimed at resolving some of the differences that have kept the clerks on the picket lines since June 15, CUPE representative Marilyn Taylor said it is quite possible a tentative agreement could be reached by the end of next week.

"It was a very good meeting. Both sides seem to be co-operating a little better, and I think we can possibly reach some kind of agreement at our next meeting," Mrs. Taylor said.

HBOG plans Brazeau plant

HBOG plans to build a new plant in Brazeau, Alberta, to produce pulp and paper. The plant is expected to be completed by 1983 and will have a capacity of 1,000 cords of pulp per day. The plant will be owned and operated by HBOG, a subsidiary of the Canadian Paper Mills Association. The plant is located on the banks of the Brazeau River, about 100 miles north of Edmonton. The plant will produce a variety of pulp products, including kraft pulp, which is used in the production of paper and cardboard. The plant is expected to create about 100 jobs in Brazeau. HBOG has been in the process of securing the necessary permits and approvals for the plant. The company has received approval from the Alberta government and the Canadian government. The plant is expected to be one of the largest pulp plants in Canada. HBOG has a long history of producing pulp and paper products. The company has been in operation since 1950 and has a reputation for quality and reliability. The new plant in Brazeau will be a major addition to HBOG's production capacity. The company is confident that the plant will be a success and will contribute significantly to the local economy. HBOG is committed to environmental protection and has implemented a number of measures to ensure that the plant operates in an environmentally sound manner. The company has also committed to providing training and development opportunities for its employees. HBOG is looking forward to the completion of the plant and the start of production. The company is confident that the new plant will be a valuable asset to the Brazeau community and the Canadian pulp and paper industry.

Perform Mirkwood Journey

By Roxanne Grosvenor
Hobbits, dwarves, wizards and orcs will once again roam the world as they follow the strange, twisting path which lead to Mirkwood.

The small folk who are seldom seen by human eyes will appear in Journey to Mirkwood, a play which will be presented Friday evening at 7 p.m. behind Eldorado School.

A local Drayton Valley group called The Company will be presenting the play, which is loosely based on the book The Hobbit, by J.R.R. Tolkien.

The play will follow the adventures of Bilbo Baggins (Joanne Kilgus), Thorin Oakenshield (Brenda Prentice) and Gandalf the Wizard (Deane Whalen) as they travel to Mirkwood. The road, however, is fraught with hazards such as giant spiders, trolls, goblins and even a dragon (all played by Terry Grinde and Dave Beasley).

Journey to Mirkwood is a children's drama aimed at ages six to nine. The play is from the school known as total participation theatre.

This means that the children will go on the journey through Mirkwood, along with the actors, says Dave Beasley.

Those parents who are interested in having their children participate in the play may sign up at the Eldorado playground on Friday afternoon. Admission to the play is free.

Anything by Mr. Beasley, there is room for only 50.

show will go on at 8 p.m. He added that in case of rain, the play, which was to be held in the woods behind Eldorado School, will be rescheduled to another date.

Parents west of Drayton Valley are still undecided, and a forest service spokesman says the danger of forest fires has gone from extreme to "very extreme."

Frances Munnick, fire watch officer at the Elk River tower, said Monday that while no fire have been reported in the area, the forests are still extremely dry, and the danger of fires has been increased by the hot dry winds that have blown up lately.

"Right now, I would classify the danger as very extreme, especially with the winds the way they are, and unless we get some rain pretty quick, we could be in trouble," Mr. Munnick said.

A small fire was reported north and west of Rocky Mountain House on Saturday, but it was quickly extinguished by an initial attack crew.

The forests are so dry, Mr. Munnick said, that the leaves are already starting to fall prematurely.

"They aren't changing color or anything like that. It's just been too dry for the leaves to stay on."

While the lack of rainfall is heightening the fire danger, the water supply at the tower site is also getting dangerous low. Mr. Munnick, who relies on rain water for his supplies, says

Noise bylaw in effect

Town council's new noise bylaw was put into effect this weekend by Drayton Valley RCMP.

The bylaw was shown to the occupants of two noisy parties with the warning that a repeat of the noise would result in charges.

According to RCMP, the weekend was relatively quiet with four complaints of noise and two complaints of disturbances at the Drayton Valley Hotel. Charges were not laid in any of the cases.

There were two charges of impaired driving and four accidents over the weekend. No injuries were reported.

Settlement

"There are several ways of implementing the changes and that is one of the things we will have to talk about," she said.

The primary victory for the union at Monday's meeting was the YSD's agreement to back pay for 1980, although details still have to be worked out regarding amounts and retroactive dates.

"These kinds of details still have to be worked out, but at least management has agreed to give us the back pay, and that's a major step forward," Mrs. Taylor added.

Additionally, differences regarding a classification study for the clerks, including teacher aides, were resolved, and the only matter left to that time is ironing out the details.

This will be left up to the joint committee—the management committee and our committee—to work out timelines and such before that is completed," Mrs. Taylor said.

Kenneth Puhmann, representative for the YSD, was unavailable for comment following the meeting.

Volunteer

They've put out this call, and now it's our turn to do our bit for the town of Drayton Valley.

Both branches of the local protective services team have requested volunteers - the RCMP for auxiliary members, and the fire department for volunteer personnel.

As is nearly always the case, the volunteers of any organization are the ones who do most of the work, make most of the sacrifices, yet receive no pay and almost no recognition from the general public.

How many times have you stopped a volunteer fireman on the street and thanked him for a job well done?

How many times have you stopped an auxiliary RCMP member and thanked him for devoting his time to the town, in an effort to make it just a little better place to live in?

These men, and women, place their community before all else when they're on the job, and more often than not, they place their lives on the line.

A volunteer fireman has no idea what situation he is in for when he answers a fire call, and an auxiliary RCMP officer is exposed to the same dangers as regular RCMP officers are exposed to, without the added protection of a gun on his belt.

For too long, the people of Drayton Valley have gone generally along, concerned only with making a buck for themselves.

For too long, we have relied on others to make this town a better, safer place to live, but we have to take steps, each one of us, to help improve our lives in this town.

Now we have the chance. We have the chance to do our part, to help out where help is needed, to serve our community.

Don't let this community down. Volunteer.

School

Beginning next week, schools in Drayton Valley will once again be filled with our youngsters, continuing on their path to higher education.

As well, during the morning, noon and afternoon, the streets will be filled with these students, heading to and from school.

As always, they are sometimes not as careful as they should be when crossing the streets, preoccupied with new friendships and making new ones.

At times, they will start into the street, eager to meet a friend on this other side, at times, they will suddenly crossing the street, perhaps stopping to pick up a dropped book, at times, they will ignore the crossing guards, choosing instead to cross when it is perhaps not safe to do so.

It is at these times - looked at all times - that motorists should be aware of the opportunity of our youth.

Let's make this school year one of the safest ever. Give our children a break.

Marathon

The challenge has been issued.

The local RCMP detachment is willing to field eight runners to take part in the 101 kilometre continuation of Terry Fox's Marathon of Hope, scheduled for September 15.

The RCMP have issued a challenge to anyone who wants to take part in the race and has also issued a challenge to any business in town that wants to sponsor the RCMP runners or any other participants.

Terry's marathon ended on June 28, but the search for a cure for cancer has not.

By getting out and running, in remembering Terry on September 15, you can do your part, no matter how small or large, in making Terry's dream come true.

Editor's Notebook

By Dale Lunan

First column one always has to write. It means the writer has only two choices when preparing them - the one either he light-hearted, looking forward to new adventures and off their feet, or he can choose to get the sense of hell, finally.

For reasons known only to myself, and even then, I can't say I will choose to write in the former way, and make this column a light-hearted one, full of puns and wordplay.

In the nearly 10 months that I have lived and worked in Drayton Valley, a lot of things have come and gone.

A lot of these events have passed from memory, passed only in the pages of the Western Review.

However, a great many events are still fresh in mind, as if they happened only yesterday.

Thus it is only 11 months ago that the federal government introduced its National Energy Program, generally perceived as the end of the oil and gas boom in Drayton Valley.

And yet, it is only three months ago that I took over the editor's desk, to be confronted with the paper.

paper and more paper? God, it feels like forever!

In the 11 months that I have been here, the town of Drayton Valley, and the people who reside here have been through a lot from reduced working hours to increased taxes, and while I'm not sure if the situation won't get worse, I am willing to say that the town will pull through.

Two have a common sense made up of members who are not sure if it is a somewhat better-headed man, may have only the best interests of the town at heart.

Two have an administration which, despite criticism from within and without, is doing its best with what is available, and is doing a fine job of it.

And, not least of all, you have perseverance. The people of Drayton Valley, the people who have been here since the beginning, are pioneers in the modern sense of the word. They have opened up the frontiers of the oil and gas fields around Drayton Valley, and they have laid the foundation for this town.

And those who have just recently arrived have their part to play as well. They have expressed confidence that Drayton Valley can survive. They have expressed confidence that, by pulling together, the town of Drayton Valley will endure the current hardships, and other hardships to come.

I wish I were here to watch you pull this town through, but I will watch from afar and I know that the town will survive, and the spirit of those who built this town will prevail.

Issues in Canadian Energy

By John Gorman

Canada's energy intelligentsia had not added the decade of the 80s as the period when the country would get its act together and put its energy house in order.

There was to be particular emphasis on the development of secure supplies of crude oil from Canada's bountiful resource base.

Any hopes of that objective being achieved appears to have been dashed with the enactment of the National Energy Program on October 28, 1980.

Jack MacLeod, chairman of the Canadian Petroleum Association, has summed it up about as succinctly as anybody.

"The outlook of optimism has been dented by the impact of the October budget and NEP and related events," said Mr. MacLeod in a recent statement.

"We now conclude that unless some substantial revisions are made in the provisions of the budget and NEP, and the position of the producing provinces' on energy issues, the energy independence goal that could be within Canada's grasp will slip to the end of the century or beyond."

"The sense of excitement has been replaced by a sense of frustration - or perhaps more accurately by a sense of despair."

Defining the despair, Mr. MacLeod said the political divisions in Canada concerning energy issues will deny succeeding generations of Canadians achievement of the energy and economic security that they deserve and that the resources of the country can support.

Mr. MacLeod is one of many commentators representing all sectors of Canadian economic, political and social life who have been less than enthusiastic about the federal government's approach to Canada's energy future.

In addition to its domestic detractors, international energy observers are raising their voices in disapproval at the unusual method by which the NEP approaches the nation's energy future.

The prestigious Petroleum Economist Magazine, published in the United Kingdom, offered this comment in a December article entitled Canada's Policy in Disarray.

"By any standards, Canada's vast energy resources should make early achievement of self-sufficiency a foregone conclusion. Yet deposits of oil-bearing sands await exploitation, while the frontier regions of the Arctic and East Coast offshore are looking increasingly promising. While progress has been made in all of these areas, efficient and timely development has been slow to materialize owing largely to the uncertainties mounted by the ongoing power struggle between the federal and provincial-ministry Alberta governments."

The NEP sets out the correct objective but its methods of reaching them have confounded most everybody who has perused the document. In the opening statement, finance minister Allan Rock says would be to fail to realize our greatest source of opportunity in this decade - time is running out. While Canada is not an exporter of energy and is dealing from a basic position of strength, the cliché is our error is our dependence on imported oil... the federal government feels compelled to put Canada's energy house in order."

He has defined the problem correctly, but the solutions have positioned the objective beyond reach.

Since there is a quantifiable relationship between the amount of money available to oil and gas explorers and producers, and their ability to reinvest in new exploration and development programs, the provisions of the NEP have seriously impaired the petroleum industry's ability to perform its job.

Effect of the NEP and budget include:

- Substantial cuts in exploration activity, as reduced cash flow inhibits the industry's ability to spend and borrow.
- Accelerated departure of smaller Canadian companies to the U.S. where returns on investment in oil exploration are substantially higher than in Canada.

- A decline of more than 40 per cent in Canadian drilling activity in 1981, with parallel declines in seismic field services, equipment sales and related services.
- Crippling delays in heavy oil development, all sands projects and enhanced recovery schemes.
- Takeover of assets developed by foreign controlled companies on federal lands by Petro-Canada.

The NEP has resulted in cutting food activity by almost half, eliminating jobs and investment opportunities for Canadians, and holding crude oil prices to less than half of international market prices.

Does this represent security of supply opportunity for all Canadians and fairness in pricing and revenue sharing as the NEP document purports?

Probably the most damning comment of all was issued by the Economic Council of Canada. The council says that high domestic energy investment in the next three years is the only thing that can move Canada ahead. The council estimates that 700,000 jobs are at stake in energy projects in the 1980s. Reduction in spending on energy projects in western Canada has a direct effect on the purchase of steel, trucks, automobiles, machine tools and manufactured goods in central Canada.

It appears that the authors of the NEP understand what Canada should be in the 1980s, but they have not yet figured out how to get there.

Report from Parliament

Growth fights inflation

By Joe Chek, MP

I have said on numerous occasions that energy can be the locomotive which pulls our economy forward.

But if energy can become an instrument of national purposes it is also today a symbol of the deep differences between Canada's industrial and economic policy.

On one side-out of office-are those of us who believe Canada is capable of great growth, and that the purpose of national policy should be to encourage that growth, so that more Canadians will have more wealth to share.

On the other side-and in firm control of present government policy-is a group whose preoccupation is to change the distribution of existing wealth rather than create new wealth.

Today's so-called energy is not about energy at all. It is about two quite different subjects; first, a question of dollars-who gets the money; and second, a question of ideology-about the extent of state control of a key growth industry.

The irony, of course, is that while Ottawa and the provinces fight about shares of Richfield money, real money flows the country, taking with it both present jobs and the technology and the confidence which are key to our energy future.

I will debate the Liberal National Energy Program on (Continued on page 8)

County well managed

Administration and council procedures in the County of Parkland mean to be well managed, according to the latest municipal inspector's report.

Growth

other counties. It is a disaster. It destroys Canadian enterprises. It drives investors away. It divides our country. It poisons Ontario—and the rest of Canada—inwards a deeper dependence on OPEC—making us more dependent, when we could be more independent. In other words, it does everything a national energy policy should not do.

But the question is why—and the answer to that question is that policy-makers in Ottawa today are preoccupied with sharing a shrinking pie, rather than making a bigger one. They are social scientists playing with the economy, and energy is their most evident failure.

Remember what has happened in energy. Eighteen months ago, there was agreement—in principle and in detail—between my government and Alberta on energy pricing. That agreement would have allowed Alberta and Old Lake to proceed. It would have given preferential tax treatment to Canadian companies and, through the Canadian Energy Bank and other instruments, encouraged new Canadian investment in Canadian energy.

Without question, it would have meant more exploration, more investment, more jobs, more oil, more energy independence for Canada.

That agreement was based on the goal of growth. It said: We Canadians have a great asset—and we should both control it and use it to bring more wealth to more Canadians.

The Liberal policy is different. It said the goal was not growth but distribution of wealth, and federal government control. Instead of 18 months of activity, we have had 18 months of argument, and the Canadian pie, instead of growing, has shrunk. That means we have imported more oil at higher prices. It means Canadian investment has been driven to the United States, pushing down our dollar and forcing us to import more oil. It means that both the cost and the difficulty of doing things in Canada have increased, and that has led to inflation.

The clear message here is that if we want to fight today's inflation, our goal must be growth—sustained real growth. Achieving that goal means giving priority to structural policies that encourage productivity and international competition.

Families needed

Drayton Valley families are needed to billet 14 young people involved in the Canada World Youth program.

The program is an international exchange project which will take place over seven Canada and a Third World country. The first three months of the program will be spent in Canada after which the participants will go to Canada for three months. Program participants will be in Drayton Valley from October 1 to December 10, during the time they are here, the participants, who are in age from 18 to 25 years, will work as volunteers at various jobs throughout the community. While the participants are here, Canada World Youth will also be looking for host families in the community. The program tries to find one Canadian and one Indonesian with each family.

Canada World Youth will pay host families $25 a week for each participant. For further information concerning billeting, contact John Carthy at 542-0975 during the day from Monday to Friday.

New system in use

A new system for contacting RCMP outside of the Drayton Valley office will go into effect this week. In the new system, callers must dial zero and ask for Zenith 50,000. The toll-free call goes to the Edmonton Telecommunications Centre where the complaint is recorded and routed out to patrol cars in the Drayton Valley area.

According to an RCMP spokesman, this system will be an improvement over the old one which was made up of a mobile telephone system. Two portable units with the mobile system allowed police officers to answer calls in their cars when no one was in the office. The system, however, was limited to the town as the units didn't have the range to reach beyond the town boundaries. Cpl. Tom Turner says.

He adds that with the new system, the RCMP can answer a call anywhere in the area.

Challenge issued

The Drayton Valley RCMP detachment has issued a challenge to the local able to help support the Terry Fox Marathon of 1981 by turning out on September 13 to run a 10 kilometre course to raise funds for cancer research.

RCMP Cpl. Aaron Zeltner says he can guarantee up to eight runners, drawn from RCMP personnel, if some business or group will either sponsor the runners or come up with runners of their own.

"We can come up with eight runners, and I'd like to issue a challenge to whoever wants to either support us or run with us," Cpl. Zeltner says.

Further information can be obtained from Cpl. Zeltner at 542-4608.

Popular B.C. gardens

Park by many area residents.

The extensive sunken gardens, also in an abandoned quarry, are filled with exotic trees and shrubs, rose gardens and other flowers as well as crows and waterfalls.

Nearby, but still in Queen Elizabeth Park, are tennis courts, a bowling green and pitch-and-putt golf as well as the popular Quarry House Restaurant.

The conservatory is a must for all nature lovers. It is a tripartite dome, 43 metres in diameter and 17 metres high. Illuminated at night and packed with 400 varieties of exotic plants and 50 kinds of birds.

Tropical and desert plants grow well in the controlled atmosphere of the conservatory. There are several types of palm, cacti and ferns from different countries, two kinds of banana trees, always popular with children, and the beautiful bird of paradise tree.

Plants are from Brazil, Mexico, New Zealand, China, Australia, India, Burma and other countries.

The park, conservatory and Henry Moore sculpture were donated to the city by the Blood family and are now administered by the Vancouver Board of Parks and Recreation.

Easyford caravan ends program

A family craft caravan in Easyford last week capped off a successful program of recreational activities put on by the County parks and recreation department this summer.

The craft caravan, held in the Easyford community centre from Monday to Thursday, was the final of five craft programs staged in various parts of the county over the summer months.

Marian Majewski, program co-ordinator, says Easyford had the best response of any of the five programs, averaging between 35 and 40 participants on each of the four days.

The program offered qualified instruction in crafts such as macramé, paper dolls and creative embroidery, as well as a wide variety of recreational activities for children.

In paper dolls, for example, expert instruction was provided by Laraine Brown of Drayton Valley. Mrs. Brown has been actively involved in the craft for five years, and she demonstrated for her students the complicated process of making a fat paper doll.

Unlike most recreational programs, Mrs. Majewski says the craft caravan stresses family involvement, with parents and children being encouraged to participate together.

Instead of just being a babysitting service, she says, the caravan allows

Ceasars begin title hunt on Sept. 13

MAKING IT HOME: In more, this other baserunner counted one of the many runs in a high-scoring (Hillside) baseball game last week that ended in a 7-1 tie. Drayton Valley downed the Cubs in Stayland on Thursday, to deadlock the best-of-five final series at one with apiece. (photo by Roxanne Greenlee)

By Chris Shambhoo
The Drayton Valley Ceasars will begin their hunt for the Central Alberta Soccer League (CASL) crown on September 13, taking on last-place Woodstock in the opening playoff round.
The Ceasars tied with Rimby on top of the regular season standings in the CASL, with a record of seven wins, one loss and a tie. However, their better goal for average gives the Ceasars home-field advantage in all playoff matches.
Following Drayton Valley and Rimby in the standings were Stony Plain (8-2-1), Spruce Grove (4-4-1), Camrose (4-4-1), Mayerthorpe (4-4-1), Weiskopf (2-7-1), Whitecourt (2-4-1) and Westlock (0-10-1).
In other playoff games, Rimby will take on Wetaskiwin, Stony Plain will go against Mayerthorpe and Spruce Grove will battle Camrose.
League organizers have set up a playoff system where the top team goes against the bottom club, and so on, until the final teams have been decided.

Whitecourt is the only league side not eligible for the playoffs, because they failed to play three regular season games.
If the Ceasars advance to the first round, their next game would be at home on September 20. League finals are slated for West Valley Park on September 26, with all championship playings being decided.
An awards banquet will be held in town after the final game.

Despite Woodstock's winless record, Ceasar player-spokesman Dave Beesley isn't about to take the club lightly, remembering the tough game Woodstock gave Drayton Valley earlier in the year.

Beesley says the Ceasars will be underdogged for the playoffs, so the club will need a big effort from field leaders like Chris Kelly and Rod Beeler, in order to do well.

Players expected to be away for the playoff games include goalkeeper Simon and, on, until the final teams have been decided.

Sighting on downhill shots

By Reg Hunter

If you find yourself hunting in the mountains and presented with a long shot, at a very steep angle, how will your rifle's trajectory be affected?

Do you aim high or low?

To explain this, let's look for a minute at trajectory. The curved path a bullet follows is caused by the pull of gravity. In simple terms, if your rifle is lined up perfectly, parallel with the ground, the bullet begins to drop the minute it leaves the barrel.

Theoretically, if your rifle is lined so that it points straight up at an angle of 90 degrees from the ground, the bullet, when fired, will go straight up and come straight down with no change in bullet path.

Of course this cannot be done due to wind, air currents and other factors but the two examples have a lot to do with shooting a hunting rifle.

A rifle is sighted so the bullet crosses the line of sight in straight line from your eye to the target at about 25 yards for a normal rifle and 12 1/2 yards for an iron sighted rifle. Where the bullet crosses the line of sight again depends on bullet and bullet velocity. (See figure 1.)

Gravity is at work pulling on the bullet causing it to drop.

When the rifle is pointed straight up, gravity is pulling straight down on the bullet causing it to slow down but not affecting trajectory. As I said, in this case there is no straight up and comes straight down.

Well, let's make a situation where all this comes to grips with what I have been explaining.

Let's suppose you are hunting sheep in the mountains. You are using a .370 Winchester with 180 grain bullets at a muzzle velocity of 2,500 feet per second. You have taken the time to sight in on your bullet strike three inches at 100 yards, 4 1/2 inches high at 200 yards, one inch low at 300 yards and 10 inches low at 400 yards.

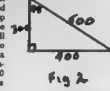

You are shooting and find a nice fat old ram as you begin your climb.

Things don't go as well as they ought to; you do get above him but you are 400 yards away and must shoot down at an angle of 45 degrees.

Do you have to shoot higher or lower than your 10 inch sight for that distance?

That is how it works.

Using a 45 degree angle and a 90 degree angle we end up with a 4-4-5 triangle. For the sake of simplicity, I will reverse the situation to explain. When we have a triangle of 4-4-5 configuration with an angled 90 degrees, it works the figure 2.

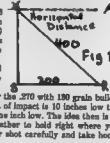

When you are shooting down at an angle of 45 degrees at a distance of 400 yards, your actual horizontal distance is 400 yards.

Apply this reasoning to the ram at an angle of 45 degrees down from your position and 400 yards away. The ram is 400 yards away from you, true, but in terms of gravity's effect on the bullet he is something less than 400 yards.

If you will look at figure 3 you will see that the true horizontal distance is in effect only 300 yards away. It is this distance upon which gravity works.

You sighting, then, will have to be as though you are shooting at 300 yards.

Back to our ballistics for the .370 with 180 grain bullet. Although the 400 yard point of impact is 10 inches low the 300 yard point of impact is one inch low. The idea then is to not shoot a little high but rather to hold right where you want to hit, square off your shot carefully and take home the trophy.

If the ram is straight across the canyon and 400 yards away you would, of course, hold for a 400 yard shot because gravity works on the bullet for 400 yards causing it to be 10 inches low.

The theory applies to shooting uphill in the same way as it does downhill.

The triangle I have cited is obviously one of extremes. You will not often be called upon to shoot at such angles and distances. It could, however, close the difference between success and failure of a very expensive hunt. That is if you judge success by bagging an animal!

Food processing

The Homemaker
by
Janice McGregor
Alberta Agriculture
542-5368

The purpose of canning is to destroy the ripening enzymes in foods and to kill the organisms that cause food spoilage—molds, yeasts and bacteria—found in the air and soil, on hands and on food.

Ketchup, yeast and molds are easily destroyed by heating foods at boiling temperatures for a short time.

To kill bacteria by heat, both temperature and time must be taken into consideration. These organisms require suitable conditions with great rapidity. Bacteria in the actively growing stage can be killed by subjecting them to boiling temperatures for variable lengths of time, but some bacteria go through a spore (dormant) form and in that stage have a much greater resistance to heat. If the jars of food do not receive enough heat, spores may survive. The time required to destroy bacteria is in part determined by the acidity of the food being canned. The natural acid in certain fruits and tomatoes adds the heat in retarding the growth of bacteria.

One type of bacteria which exists in spore form and is widely distributed in many areas, can result in disastrous results to humans if not destroyed. Unless all the spores of botulism are destroyed in canned foods (non-acid vegetables, meats, poultry or fish), the remaining spores can grow and during their growth, develop one of the most powerful poisons known to man. A canner under 10 pounds pressure or more raises the temperature of the food high enough to kill botulism spores in a short time, and at the same time does not destroy the food's texture, flavor and color. The United States Department of Agriculture and Agriculture Canada recommend the pressure canner as the only safe method of preserving non-acid foods.

Pressure canning is a way of processing foods under pressure at a temperature of 100 degrees F. This method is recommended for processing beans, meats and all other high acid foods. A steam pressure canner, or cooker, is the kitchen utensil which supplies enough heat to destroy the spores of botulism which cause food sour, botulism and some other types of spoilage.

Boiling water bath canning is a way of processing foods at a temperature of 212 degrees F. This method can be recommended for processing fruits, tomatoes, pickles and relishes and other high acid foods. Enough heat is supplied by the boiling water to destroy the bacteria, yeast, molds and yeasts which cause spoilage in acid foods. Berries, preserves, jams and preserves should be processed at simmering (180 to 190 degrees F) for 10 to 20 minutes in boiling water bath canner. However, all of these can be prepared in a pressure canner also.

Never use any "quick" methods even if you have been told it works because there is no substitute for heat treatment.

Open Kettle

This method is not recommended for home canning of fruits and vegetables. It should not be used because this method seldom sterilizes food. Without acid food, or if the food is contaminated while being transferred from kettle to jar, spoilage can result. Foods ferment when this method of canning does not destroy yeast or permit them to enter the jar before it is sealed. Getting a seal on jars will not prevent this spoilage.

Over Canning

Over canning is a real "no no". In canning it is important to know and control the temperature. In over canning the temperature will vary according to the accuracy of the oven regulator and circulation of heat. The dry heat is very slow in penetrating into the jars of food. Over canning can be dangerous. It may explode, wrecking the oven and seriously cutting or burning someone. Most important, the temperature of the food in the jars during over canning is not high enough to destroy dangerous bacteria—particularly the ones which cause the deadly botulism poisoning. (Canning in a microwave oven is also a no no.)

out our way

By Wendy Thomson

During the 13 years I've been a columnist, I've received only two letters bringing me to task for something. If it were simply a difference of opinion, I'd ignore the matter, but when somebody seems to read something that is not there, into my writings, I take the matter a little more seriously.

Open Kettle

To begin with, I wonder if my writing is at fault, giving folks like wrong impression. And I figure if one person picks up that impression, there could well be others.

Anyhow, I thought I'd take time to not everybody straight about my thoughts and impressions as an "answer" to the vast, because this means to be the point in question.

The letter I received last week read as follows:

"Reading Laura time and put effort into reading your writings for this week. Which I don't often do."

"Perhaps I have a right to hold myself up as a critic. As I don't even have a high education."

"Perhaps I can help you. I'm not sure if your writings are meant as Comely, Complaint or if you are just a blither."

"I have three history books of three different sizes in Alberta. Describing the settler some date back before the beginning of this century. I would be glad to lend them to you that you might see the light of how fortunate you are."

"I cannot close you as a planner. You have all was her mode, a car, a phone, indoor plumbing, a freezer, dishwasher, microwave oven. Have you any idea what the planners had?"

"I bet you give your friends and relative back in Ontario some take information of our property here and program also."

"I'm sorry if you are not happy here. If I can help I will."

I've read that letter through quite a few times, then looked out the column in question (July 16) to see what I'd written that could have been so misinterpreted.

"That was the week that the household appliances seemed to be coming on, and I was working about how my husband would take a long list of things when he came home from the mountains."

The writer begins by mentioning the time and effort put into reading the column. I'd have to say that if a person finds they have to make an effort to read this, then they should just forget it and go on to something they might find more enjoyable.

Why waste time and energy when there are so many other things available? But my writings are "comedy, complaint or blithering." Very rarely do I set down to type seriously. Almost everything is written tongue in cheek, many times about my inability to cope with the fundamental things in life.

I've found there are so many people that like reading about it, because I write their own problems and thoughts, and in the reading, they can laugh at themselves a little.

People who know me know that I rarely complain. I seldom blather, but I spend a good deal of time looking at "bright sides" of things.

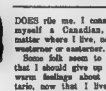

True, I do fly off the handle now and then, but nobody pays much attention to what I say. I consider myself a Canadian, no matter where I live, not a westerner or southerner. Some folk seem to feel that I should give up any warm feelings about Ontario, now that I live in Alberta.

But Ontario is my "home place" it has and always will have a special place in my heart, and I'll always be homesick for certain aspects of it.

However, if we hadn't wanted to live in Alberta we wouldn't have moved here. And if we hadn't lived in it, we wouldn't have stayed.

Would an Albertan moving to Ontario have to renounce all feelings and memories of their home? Also, some people start separating people into groups — east, west, rich, poor, black, white — then they're selling themselves up as judges, which very few of us are qualified to do. Regarding people's ideas of property and progress that's all fairly relative too, and I shy away from imposing my own ideas. Some of the richest people I know have no money. What do I tell my family and friends about Alberta? There are a great many opportunities here there is no money, and the sun shines hot and bright. The county dumps a load of gravel on our drive once a year. We have stray cattle and wildlans on the quarter. The northern lights are splendid and the nights are cold. The southerners I talk to and write to have no great interest in hearing about my (or anybody else's) homesickness or acquisitions. We talk about dreams and goals, about problems and evasions.

And lastly I say that westerners are friendly — but so more friendly than folks in our Ontario farm communities.

Why should they be different? My final thought... politicians are doing well enough in dividing the country without people picking up and waving the same banners.

Enough said. Except for thanks to my reader for her concern.

Alder Flats news by Bernice Johnson 388-3863

Red Deer, Ken Morton of Drayton Valley, son Brian and Donna Lillo of Sylvan Lake and son Doug and Carla Haglund of Edmonton. On Aug. 26, 65 friends and relatives gathered at the home of Leigh Miller for a buffet supper and to celebrate Nanny Miller's 90th birthday. She received a variety of gifts and flowers. Her birthday cake was made and decorated by Anne Capenik.

Nanny still lives and takes care of her own house in the city as well as looking after a small garden. We wish her many more years of birthday and continued good health. Dwight Kallgren was a patient in the hospital, but in home now and we hope on the road to complete recovery. It's nice to see Bob.

Shanberg feeling good again after a long stay with back trouble. Congratulations to the three sons of westward-bound. Brenda Schindler and Bill Havel were married Aug. 7. ## Positions help varicose veins

By Linda Cliven

I am waiting for a cure for varicose veins. I saw on tv that there is now a method of microsurgery to correct varicose veins, so maybe that is coming.

I read that black strap molasses cures varicose veins in some people. It is worth trying, also it also is a rich source of iron and calcium. I will let you know if it works.

Some of the other "cures" were a bit too drastic for me to even try, like the cleansing diet where you live on lettuce and apple strips for a minimum of 10 days, and the "eat everything raw and whole" diet. In the meantime, I have my supply of elastic bandages and support panty hose and avoid salt, fatigue and long line-ups.

The knee and thigh stretch is a yoga posture which claims to prevent varicose veins during pregnancy. (It started yoga too late.)

Begin seated with the back straight.

Bring the soles of the feet together, and then bring the heels as close to the body as possible allowing the knees to fall to the sides.

Interlace the fingers, slip them onto the feet, and pull up on the feet while stamping to press the knees to the floor.

Hold the posture for at least 10 seconds.

If the knees are far from the floor, you may place your elbows on top of the thighs, and gently push down.

The eagle is a balancing posture which is recommended for varicose veins. It also promotes suppleness in the legs and shoulders, and improves the leg calf.

Stand on the left leg slightly, and twist the right leg over the left leg so that the right instep is tucked behind the left calf.

Cross the arms in front of you so that the left elbow is resting on the right biceps, and interlace the fingers. Breathe steadily, breathing evenly, for a minimum of 10 seconds.

For a more advanced version of the eagle, bend forward in the posture to place the elbow on the thigh just above the knee.

Since varicose veins are caused by faulty valves in the leg which allow blood to collect and stay, all inverted postures are helpful in returning the blood to the heart. For relaxation, place the bottom against a wall with the legs resting against the wall. Allow the feet to fall to the sides, and relax for as long as you feel comfortable in the posture.

You may also wish to relax on a slatboard. Bouncing and nodding are worse which have no meaning except that we are locked in time.

400 attend supper and dance

works, and went to see the Pioneer Sisters in concert. While in Los Angeles, Annette got to play a wife in a stunt show.

In Sacramento, they stayed with friends of Ladrons where they picked and ate fresh grapefruit for breakfast.

They stopped in Seattle and then back to Vancouver where they visited Stanley Park and Linda's aunt and uncle, Nora and Lloyd Redwood at Langley. Linda returned home by plane.

The Norman Moore family has moved into the new home they have built this summer. Brenda and Mari Hardman purchased their trailer home and will be moving it to a lot at Alder Plaza.

Steve and Sophie Steffur spent Saturday in Leduc and visited their great-grandchildren. Margaret Steffur went along with them.

Lara and Doris Larson flew to Calgary to attend a surprise 50th wedding anniversary celebration for Agnes and Lyle Payne.

The Legion Hall has been given a new look with new siding and a new sign. Dennis Johnson left by air on Aug. 13 to spend two weeks with his brother Gerry and Cynthia at Surrey, B.C.

Visitors on the last long weekend with us were, on Sunday, Bill and Dyl Meyer of Alta. Monday visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Kapetanov of Kamers. Danny Kapetanov and Richard Komolovics of Edmonton.

Tuesday evening visitors were Jim and Colleen Chapman and Marley of Brant.

We attended a nephew's wedding, Brad Johnson and Wendy Harrison, who were married in Red Deer Aug.

18, and Mary Dunn and Beauchamp Coldwell at the same evening.

The Ready and Patsy Hedin families of Calgary have been recent visitors with relatives here.

Former youths put on a potpourri for young people from the area and exciting friends. Four hundred persons attended the supper and dance at the Alder Plaza Community Hall, where the celebration started off with a hot roast beef dinner followed with a dance. Music was by Rick.

A special thanks goes to all the ladies who prepared and set out the food that got the evening off to a great start, and to all those people who were there when they were needed.

As a token of appreciation,

Roundup

Roundup®. It can be one of your most versatile tools.

Wherever you use it, Roundup® herbicide by Monsanto controls tough emerged weeds - right down to the roots - so they can't grow back. Yet Roundup has no carryover. And it won't wash or leach out of treated areas to injure crops or other desirable vegetation.

Reach for Roundup to control both annual and perennial weeds in your zero-till management program. Use Roundup as a spot treatment to control tough weeds like quackgrass right in the crop, or Canada thistle on summer-fallow land. After harvest, Roundup controls quackgrass, which means easier tillage the following spring. And don't forget general farmyard cleanup around shelterbelts, headlands and buildings. In all kinds of places, nothing works like Roundup!

Cranberries are rich in vitamins

By Linda Olsson
There are few bush cranberries, high bush cranberries, and bog cranberries. I have been able to find the low bush cranberries, and had to go only as far as my gate to collect some.

The berries are shiny, orange, red and grow in clusters. They can be easily identified by taste.

Cranberries are rich in Vitamin C and A, and in iodine and sodium. They contain three acids—ascorbic, quinic and benzoic. Acids aid in the digestion of protein, which is the remaining ingredient serving cranberry jelly with turkey, apple sauce with pork, and vinegar with fish.

Cranberries store well in the fridge, and freeze well.

To make cranberry jelly, wash and stem the berries. Cover with water and boil until they burst, three.

For every four cups of juice, add three cups of sugar.

Boil, and bring to a boil. Test with a metal spoon. When the drops form a sheet on the spoon, remove from heat, and pour into sterilized jars.

For a thicker sauce, add two cups of relative to every four cups of juice and three cups of sugar. Prepare as above.

Cranberry juice is a good substitute for powdered drink mixes.

Serve the cranberry jelly with apple juice for cranberry juice. For a party drink, combine 1/4 cup orange juice, 1/4 cup cranberry juice, and 1/4 cup vodka. Serve poured over ice.

For Maritime chicken, use a three-pound broiler. Bake on a spit, and coat with 1/4 cup flour and a dash of salt. Brown in about four tablespoons of butter.

Combine 1 1/2 cups cranberries, 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 cup chopped onion, 1/4 cup orange juice, 1/4 cup brown sugar, and 1/4 cup each of cinnamon and nutmeg. Put with butter, pour over the chicken, and cook for 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

We also enjoy cranberry jelly on toast. I believe it more by boiling a little longer.

For spicy baked apples, core six firm apples. Put

Violations

A California-based company has been convicted of importing and selling a falsely-labelled soil conditioner.

Helas Sullivan of California, owner of D Enterprises in Edmonton, recently pleaded guilty in Edmonton municipal court to two counts of violating the Federal Fertilizers Act.

The shipment was seized at an Edmonton warehouse by regional officials of Agriculture Canada's Food Protection and Inspection Branch.

Ayrshires

Canadian Ayrshire cattle are part of a project to improve the dairy industry in Japan.

Three Ayrshire heifers were shipped to Japan from British Columbia last year so their performance could be tested against Canadian Holsteins and other cattle. All three heifers, believed to be the first of the breed in Japan, have calved since then.

Another three to 10 Ayrshires are expected to be sent to Japan in 1981.

Potatoes

The key to new improved potato varieties for Canadian producers could lie in South America.

The potato originated high in the Andes mountains and from there made its way to Europe and then North America. This led to a narrow genetic base for North American potato breeding.

At Agriculture Canada's Production research station, scientists have imported primitive potato varieties from South America to cross with established varieties. They hope to produce higher-yielding plants with increased resistance to pests and disease.

Uniform favors decision

Uniform vice-president R.B. Bell of Carleton Place last week that he is very pleased with a decision by the Energy Resources Conservation Board (ERCB) to change the target area for oil well drilling spacing units to the northeast corner of quarter sections.

However, the board said, if gas wells should be drilled on quarter section spacing, their target areas would be identical to those for quarter section oil well spacing. The change became effective September 1 throughout the province, exclusive of green areas and some specially designated localities.

In its extension to the board last March, Uniform contended that the location of wells in the middle of the section was suboptimal.

Unconventional extra work then, safety hazards and increased costs to agricultural producers required to farm around surface installations.

Uniform also expressed concern about land removed from agricultural production or subjected to reduced productivity because of unsightly well sites and unsightly access roads. It also noted problems of restoring lands to normal crop production following well abandonment.

In a brief, Uniform noted that locating gas and oil wells in the corners of quarter sections was the preferred choice of most agricultural producers and farmers around surface installations.

Federal government officials in Ottawa last week with representatives of the province of Alberta to review a co-operative effort begun as years ago to strengthen the economy of rural Alberta.

Through a joint agreement signed on August 30, the two governments pledged a total of $25 million over the next three years to encourage the building, expansion or modernization of processing facilities in rural areas that produce nutritive products.

Signaling the agreement were Pierre De Bane, federal minister of regional economic expansion and Dick Johnston, Alberta's minister of federal and intergovernmental affairs.

Federal minister of state for economic development and Mr. Bert Hargrave, MP for Medicine Hat, were also present at the ceremony.

In concluding the pact, both federal ministers noted the success of the original Nutritive Processing Assistance Agreement in addressing rural development issues in Alberta, but stressed the need for continued co-operative development in this area.

Under the original agreement have strength and diversified Alberta's rural economic base while creating new job opportunities for rural and urban Albertans.

to become an even greater contributor to the provincial and national economies in the future.

The original Nutritive Processing Agreement was signed in 1975 and since that time 288 offers of financial assistance worth almost $15 million have been made to nutritive processors for new, expanded or modernized facilities. This has in turn resulted in an estimated 880 million in new private capital investment in rural areas of the province, creating an expected 1,850 new jobs.

Senator Olson said the new agreement will further strengthen the linkage between the farmer and the processor.

nutritive products that have achieved or may achieve a competitive position in national or export markets."

Mr. De Bane and Senator Olson pointed to a new agreement will undertake to encourage research and development in the nutritive sector. They said that financial assistance will be made available to operations that undertake research aimed at nutritive processing, with emphasis on its application to rural communities.

A nutritive product is one derived from a plant or animal.

The Nutritive Processing Assistance Agreement is jointly administered by the governments of Canada and Alberta and all funding is shared equally by the two governments.

"It is important to further process in Alberta those
